IN MEMORIAM

In sad but loving remembrance of my dear mother, Edna W. Baldwin, who died 18 years ago, February 2, 1933.

Eighteen years ago today, dear
Your eyes were closed in death.
You went to dwell in heaven,
And daughter was all you left.

It was hard to give you up, dear,
For your race so short was run,
But I know upon my darling,
There now shines a brighter sun.

Oh! My darling, how you suffered,
There is no mortal tongue can tell,
But the Bible gives assurance
That Jesus doeth all things wel'.

Some day I hope to meet you,
Where no sorrows ever come.
And with Jesus there to greet me,
In that beautiful home.
—Daughter.

U.S. SAVINGS BOND

January 29 is the birthday of one of the revered Presidents of this country, William McKinley. Pres. McKinley knew and practiced the habit of thrift. He realized that it was thrift which helped build this country. He advocated an early start in savings in the following words: "The little savings bank in the home means more for the future of the children of a family, almost than all of the advice of the world. It gives them the right start." Your right start is to sign up today for the Payroll Savings Plan for the purchase of U. S. Savings Bonds.

ENGAGEMENT
OF MISS SCOTT

GROSCH - STANLEY

Miss Anne Thomas Stanley, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James H. Stanley, and William Oren Grosch, son of Mr. and Mrs. William Henry Grosch, all of Richmond, were married Friday afternoon, February 2, at four o'clock in the home of the bride on Rhodney Road, Britton's Hill Farm. The Rev. Theodore F. Adams, pastor of the First Baptist Church, Richmond, officiated. The bride, who was given in marriage by her father, wore a faille suit of bride's blue and carried a Bible and an orchid. Miss Phyllis Anne Whitmore, her maid of honor, wore a beige suit and carried a nosegay of spring flowers. Conrad Houston was best man.

Following a reception, Mr. and Mrs. Grosch left for a southern wedding trip.

The bride is the neice of Mrs. H. M. Burge and R. W. Stanley of Appomattox and has often visited here.

Farmers Use Larger Part Of Income for Fertilizer

Farmers spend a larger proportion of their income for fertilizer than they did before the war, a recent survey revealed. The average amount used, however, may still be no more than half the amount that could be used economically.

A fairly general standard is that a farm should be using the equivalent of 100 to 200 pounds of single strength fertilizer per year for each tillable acre in the farm. A farm of 160 tillable acres using 150 pounds per tillable acre per year would require 12 tons of fertilizer per year.

For most economical operation it seems certain that crop expense is not an item to reduce but one that the average farmer needs to increase. For example, good seed is high priced, but generally the increase in yield offsets the added cost.

Atomic Farmer

Aaron Ganz of Chicago, the "atomic farmer" who has grown radioactive tobacco plants, received his doctor of philosophy degree in pharmacology at the University of Chicago.

Ganz, working at the university's "atomic farm", grew tobacco plants in air containing radioactive carbon dioxide. Minute doses of nicotine extracted from the radioactive plants was injected into rats and mice for the purposes of studying the behavior of nicotine in the human body. Ganz's tests showed that the body quickly gets rid of nicotine. The liver was shown to pick up more of the nicotine than any other organ, the brain the least.

Heifers Should be Bred By Weight — Not Age

Many dairymen have calving troubles in heifers even though they don't breed them until they are 15 to 16 months old, specialists report. These calving difficulties are usually due to small heifers that have not been grown out properly, the specialists said.

Feeding of proper growing ration will mature heifers quicker and start them on the road to production.

SOIL DISTRICTS COOPERATE WITH GAME COMMISSION

Cooperation between the Virginia Commission of Game and Inland Fisheries, and the Soil Conservation Districts throughout the state has taken an upward turn during the past year with the making of working agreements between the Commission and more than 50 per cent of the Districts. The remaining districts are now being approached by the Commission, and agreements are expected to be made during 1951.

The Soil Conservation Districts already in the plan have readily accepted the advantages of cooperating with the Commission in carrying out the wildlife phase of the entire conservation picture.

The cooperative working agreements with the districts are the basis of the Commission's major farm-game project through which the state agency hopes to improve farm-game habitat throughout the Commonwealth.

In 1951 it is estimated that over 5,000 farmers in Virginia will receive assistance in planting wildlife borders through this program.

Collection of Pseudo Gems Thrills Museum Visitors

There are stones with all the color and sparkle of emeralds or sapphires, some of them as large as 8 to 10 inches in radius. All that keeps them from becoming supergems is their softness. They are crystals of lead or copper mixed with carbon or sulfur.

A collection of these, probably the finest in the world, has been received by the Smithsonian institution and has been set up as a breath-taking exhibit in the U. S. national museum. It came from the copper-mining district of the former German southwest Africa and was gathered over a period of many years. Although stones of the same sort are known from other parts of the world, nothing else yet known approaches the African specimens.

These pseudo-gems are crystals of such minerals as azurite (carbonated copper), cerussite (lead carbonate), and dioptase (copper silicate). The last is probably the most striking, the crystals having the appearance of gigantic emeralds. Very striking also are the lead carbonates, which have a luster comparable with that of diamonds.

All these minerals are formed by percolating waters and occur in cavities of the upper layers of copper deposits. The collection on exhibition in Washington contains approximately 900 specimens and was gathered as a hobby by a former superintendent of a South African copper mine. It forms an exhibit unique in the world, say Smithsonian mineralogists.

Washing Machine Care

Washing machines kept in a cold place, such as an outside porch, should be brought into a warm room several hours before using. If this precaution is not taken, the oil or grease in the machine may be so stiff that the starting load will be heavy enough to blow a fuse in the circuit. Also, procelain enamel tubs need to have the chill off before using. If hot water is poured into a very cold tub, the enamel may crack.

Have you turned in your March of Dimes contribution?

Metal Impurities in Food Spotted by New Technique

Easy detection of heavy metal impurities in food and drug products is promised by application of a simple new analytical technique known as paper chromatography.

Scientific laboratories throughout the world are using this powerful new aid for the investigation of medical and biochemical problems. In contrast to the complicated and expensive apparatus so often needed in modern science, here nothing more alaborate is required than a strip of paper and a suitable solvent saturated with water.

With this simple equipment, chemical compounds in extremely complicated mixtures can be separated from one another and identified where usual laboratory procedures fail. Better still, the technique often can be employed to detect extremely minute quantities of material.

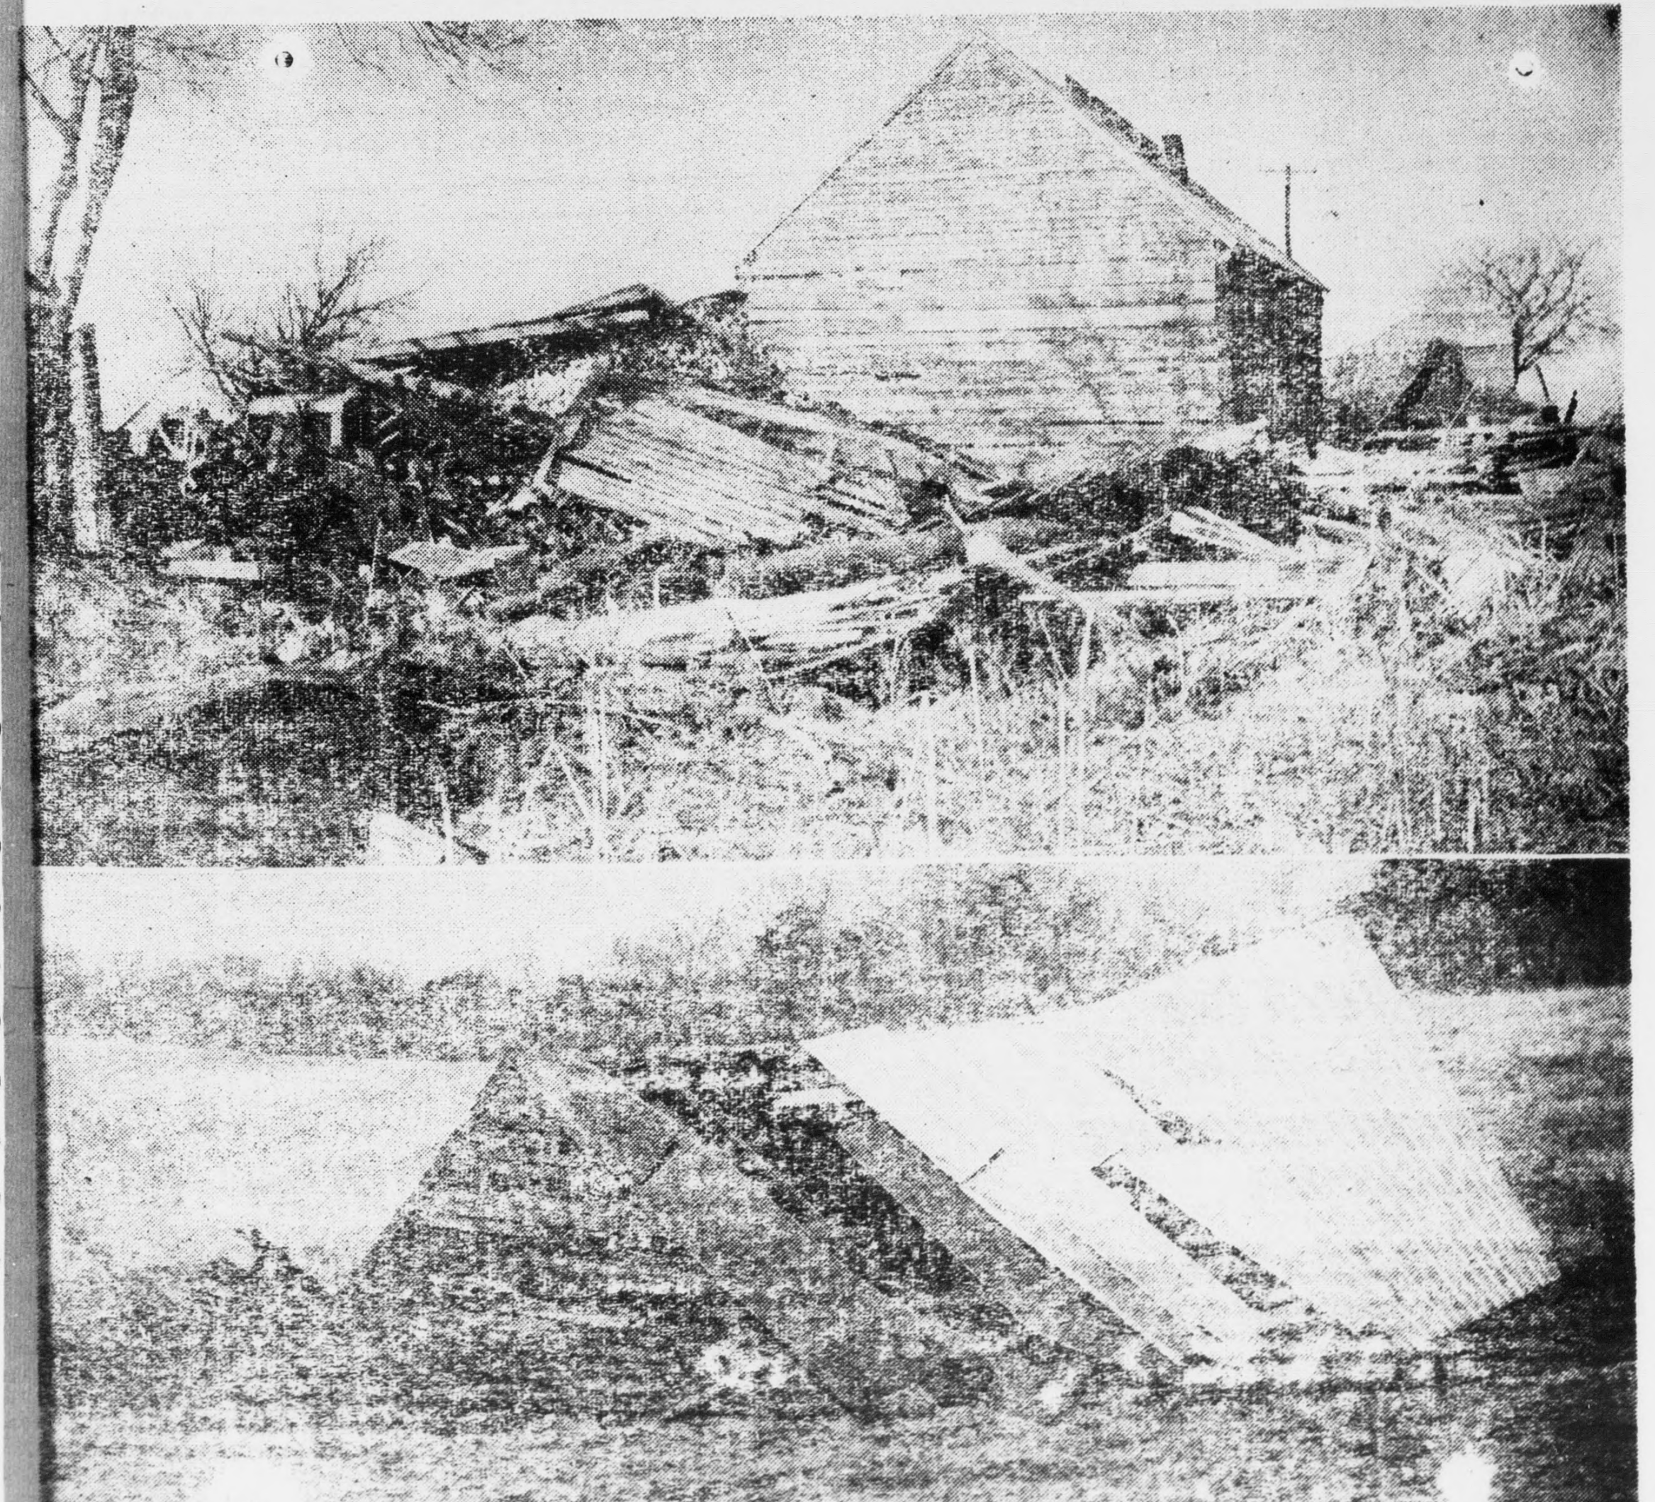
Although the idea of using a paper base for the separation of compounds goes back about ninety years, the potentialities of the methods were not fully realized until 1944, when a group of English workers succeeded in separating and identifying the amino acids in wool by paper chromatography. Since then the technique has been extended to every conceivable class of compound and has speeded the solution of numerous scientific problems.

Dangerous Pennies

Did you know that a penny in the fuse socket can turn your house into a firetrap? Many people are still blissfully unconscious of the danger of overheating wires by replacing a burned-out fuse with a penny. The right way is to keep extra fuses of the right size near the service box in case of an emergency. When a fuse "blows" it's a warning that your wires are carrying more electricity than they should. You may be using too many appliances on one circuit or there is some defect in an appliance. Or the trouble may be in a cord or the wiring. In any case the trouble should be corrected before you put in a new fuse. And above all, don't use a penny to replace a fuse—you'll come out much better by using your pennies elsewhere.

Flight of Lucky Lady II

On March 2, 1949, an air force B-50, the "Lucky Lady II," completed the first nonstop circumnavigation of the world. During this historic flight the Lucky Lady II was refueled in the air from B-29 flying tankers over the Azores, Saudi-Arabia, the Phillippines, and Hawaii. The Lucky Lady II took off from Carswell Air Force Base near Fort Worth, Tex., at 11:21 p. m., on February 26, 1949. Ninety-four hours and one minute later, it returned to its home base after having flown a total distance of 23,452 miles at an average speed of 249 miles an hour.



Above: A flash wind storm hit an area on the farm of F. A. O'Brien, three miles from here, last Thursday afternoon. Trees were uprooted, and the corn crib above was demolished and the tin roof hurled some fifty yards away into a field. No one was injured.
